Hall of Famer Tish Johnson Wins 2018 Senior Queens

Tish Johnson

LAS VEGAS – United States Bowling Congress Hall of Famer Tish Johnson of Colorado Springs, Colorado, finally claimed the USBC Senior Queens tiara she's coveted, defeating fellow USBC Hall of Famer Jeanne Naccarato at Gold Coast on Sunday.

Johnson, a 55-year-old left-hander, capped a dominating performance this week with a 267-191 title-match victory over Naccarato of Tacoma, Washington. Johnson earned $8,000 for the win, while Naccarato's second-place finish netted her $6,400.

Johnson, who recorded four consecutive runner-up finishes at the Senior Queens from 2013-2016, left no doubt in 2018, striking on nine of her first 10 deliveries in the final.

Naccarato, who claimed her third career title at the National Golden Ladies Classic earlier in the week, put herself in position to win a second title in Las Vegas but saw her chance slip away after back-to-back opens in the fifth and sixth frames against Johnson.

Between the USBC Queens and Senior Queens, Johnson failed to secure a tiara in nine championship-round appearances prior to her win Sunday.

When she saw the look she wanted during practice on the championship pair and caught a few early hits against Naccarato, the 25-time Professional Women's Bowling Association Tour titlist knew it was her time.

"I saw a lot of different looks during match play, but the championship pair played just like qualifying for me," said Johnson, who also is a member of the PWBA Hall of Fame. "Right away, I had a game plan, and anytime I can go away from the pocket, I can be pretty dangerous.

Just Paying Attention

By Mark London
Mark@TheBowlingNews.net

Social media sites like Facebook and Twitter can be good places to find tournament information. One of the best on Facebook in our circulation area, for example, is Xeno Garcia's Southwest Bowlers page. Other tournament groups have had their own Facebook pages for a number of years, like SASBA, NDO, and each of the PBA's regions are the first to come to mind.

But what if you're looking for a smartphone app featuring a database of tournaments nationwide? A computer programmer out of northern Missouri offers an answer to that question.

Brian Menini, a multi-PBA Midwest Regional winner and proprietor of Brookfield Bowl in Brookfield, Missouri, has designed a webpage known as ibowltournaments.com.

Menini answered a few questions about why he designed the site, its apps (both android and iOs apps are available now on Google Play), and features making it much more interactive than anything in the industry right now.

JPA: What is your background in computers?

Brian Menini: I have been working with computers since 1980 on my TI99/4A. Then moved up to a CPM machine, then a PC. I currently work for an outsourcing company in addition to owning an 8 lane center. I have been through a programming bootcamp and have been working on development for the last 4 years or so.

JPA: What inspired you to start ibowltournaments.com?

Menini: I have always had a hard time hearing about tournaments to bowl, therefore missing several opportunities to bowl. I was always pretty active at trying to find tournaments by looking in the local papers, or centers I would go into. But that included grabbing a piece of paper that usually ended up in my bowling bag and forgotten about. I now live in a rural area and it is still hard finding tournaments. I will see some on Facebook, but then when you try to find them again, they are gone. Hosts have to continually post reminders about the tournament and hope people share it to gain entries. If the right people see it, it works. I wanted something that would allow me to locate a tournament when I wanted to see it, easily and quickly, without having to remember what page I saw it on, or what center it was at, or what day it was. A lot of the pages for tournaments on Facebook are images and those are not searchable using text.

JPA: How long ago did you see this as a viable database for bowlers across the country?

Menini: I had a poor attempt at a site about 18 years ago, called bowlingschedule.com. I was always just hoping someone would create something, but it never happened. There are very basic versions of tournament sites out there, but it usually requires someone else to enter the tournament for you, some have horrible sorting, no tournaments, and no benefits to hosts or users for using the site.

JPA: How will you get tourney info, by submitted information, by information you find elsewhere, or a combination of both?

Menini: For now it is a combination of both. The goal is to have everyone who runs tournaments enter their own or have a designated administrator to do it for them. If someone contacts me, I will add it for them if they need me to, but there are still over 4000 centers in the US, and I want this to be the first place people go to find tournaments. It is completely free for users and hosts, and is a direct link to a database of users that bowl tournaments meaning potential entries and more entries is a win-win for everyone. More lineage to the center, more brackets, sidepot money, tournament cash spots, and more bowlers gaining the experience necessary to complete at a high level.

JPA: Is there a plan to get webpage sponsors in and out of the industry?

Menini: Ultimately, I would like to get sponsors for the site as there is a cost to create and run the site and apps. I have several ideas and have implemented a localized ad system that will allow me to sell ads locally or nationwide. I can turn on or off certain states to make sure to reach people within those states. So when an ad is purchased, you can buy 1 state at a time, either pick which states, or display it to the entire U.S.

JPA: I've noticed there are a number of tournaments in the database already. What has been the response to tourney organizers and bowlers so far?

Menini: So far all the responses I have received have been positive. The only negatives I have had are from me so far. I will be calling centers and tournament coordinators to help facilitate the use of the site, and apps. I will also be creating some tutorials since some of the items are only visible when you start using the site, meaning they require a little more in depth use of the site to get to them.

The goal for me is to eliminate the need for Facebook pages as those are very hard to locate tournaments, even when you are on them on a regular basis. In addition to that it takes a lot of time to go through some of the pages to find something that is actually in your area. If this site is used as designed, it should help eliminate competing events in the same area, unless it is done on purpose, allow more time for hosts and coordinators to focus on creating new events by taking some of the work away from them and automating it via automatic reminders, bowler lists, and ease of use entering tournaments, especially for multiple events in the same center or run by the same club.

Next week, Menini goes into more detail about the very specific and unique functions of his webpage. Also, bowling is shown off in the ever-changing multimedia landscape of local television news.

Sweden's Jenny Wegner Wins Brunswick Euro Challenge

Runnerup Anthony Simonsen, Winner Jenny Wegner and Third Place Yannaphon Larpapharat

MUNICH, Germany (March 18, 2018) – Sweden's Jenny Wegner won the PBA International-World Bowling Tour Brunswick Euro Challenge Sunday at Dream-Bowl Palace, thwarting a 10th frame comeback bid by tournament leader Anthony Simonsen.

Simonsen, the top qualifier, quickly fell behind when Wegner, the 2016 Qubica AMF World Cup women's champion, started the title match with five strikes. But the contest changed direction when the 23-year-old Swedish kindergarten teacher failed to convert the 1-2-4-10 washout in the seven frame. She still had the match under control until she left the 2-8 in both the ninth and 10th frames. Despite failing to convert the 1-8 spare in her final frame, the eight handicap pins-per-game awarded to all women in the tournament allowed Wegner hold off Simonsen for the title.

Simonsen, who had thrown only one strike on the right lane previously in the match, threw two strikes before leaving the 10 pin on his final shot for an actual 213-211 margin, but with her handicap pins, Wegner won by a 219-213 margin.

Simonsen, a 21-year-old two-handed player from Austin, Texas, started the seven-game Step Three match play round with games of 300, 287 and 278 – an 865 series – to expand his lead and he comfortably maintained his position all the way to the championship match.

In the first match of the three-player stepladder finals, Thailand's Yannaphon Larpapharat dug himself into a 21-pin hole after failing to convert a pair of splits, and Wegner had a double and a turkey in a clean game for a 233-214 win to advance to the title match.

Next on the Go Bowling! PBA Tour's 2018 schedule will be the United States Bowling Congress Masters April 8-15 at the Oncenter Convention Center in Syracuse, N.Y., where defending champion Jason Belmonte of Australia will try for an unprecedented fifth Masters title, which also would result in a PBA record-tying 10th major championship.

PBA's Xtra Frame online bowling channel will live stream all qualifying and three-game double-elimination match play rounds of the

"You lead (the Senior Queens) enough and start to wonder if it's ever going to be your turn. After getting a messenger in the first, tripping out the 6-8 and seeing Jeanne miss a couple of spares, which she never does, I started to think it was going to be my time. Being able to have my family and a lot of friends here made it incredible."

Johnson earned the top spot through qualifying (234.47 average for 15 games) and rolled through match play leading up to her title tilt against Naccarato. She averaged more than 240 in her five wins in match play, including a 782-603 victory over Sharon Powers of Lakewood, Colorado, to claim the top seed for the stepladder finals.

As the top seed in the true double-elimination format, Naccarato would've had to beat Johnson twice to claim her first tiara.

Naccarato advanced to the title match with a dramatic finish against Powers, delivering three strikes in the 10th frame to win, 204-203. Powers, who qualified second, had the chance to shut out Naccarato, but she left a 2-4-5 combination on her fill ball to give Naccarato the opening.

Naccarato, the No. 3 seed, used a late run of four consecutive strikes to best Michele Carter of National City, California, 228-212.

In the opening match of the stepladder, Carter started with six consecutive strikes and outdistanced Shandy Simchen, also from Tacoma, 244-220.

A four-player shootout round determined the No. 3, No. 4 and No. 5 seeds for the stepladder, and Naccarato paced the field with a 683 series. Simchen earned the No. 4 seed with a 622 effort, and Carter claimed the final spot by finishing with a 236 game to edge MeiLing Billingsley of Lee's Summit, Missouri, 571-567. Billingsley finished in sixth place.

Qualifying at the 2018 Senior Queens consisted of 15 games over two days to determine the 31 players who joined defending champion and USBC Hall of Famer Lucy Sandelin of Tampa, Florida, in the double-elimination match-play bracket.

All matches leading up to the stepladder finals were decided by total pinfall over

Thanks to Darlene Hatt and the staff of Planet Bowl for hosting.

Our next tournament is March 31-April 1 we are at Cowtown Bowling Palace for a 70/60/50/guest Foursome.

Please Note: We are trying different formats for the Age Bracket tournaments this year to see which ones are successful and liked by the members. The upcoming Age bracket at Emerald Bowl will be 8 games of qualifying on Saturday in your Age group (50,60 or 70). 1-3 in each group will cash and the top 8 from each group will bowl round robin match play finals on Sunday. There will still be a second chance sweeper on Sunday for those not cashing on Saturday.
