Then in the 2-game total pin matchplay finals he won 5 straight matches.

Charles beat Steve Wright (494-410), John Shuffler (480-400), Terry Williams (428-421), Mike McHugh (523-417) before defeating David Scardaville (466-416) for the title and $1,300.

and Couch (Silver Lake and Philadelphia) will announced their three protected players. Cain and Dorin-Ballard (L.A. and New York City) will select their three protected players by no later than January 21, and Ballard and Petraglia (Motown and Brooklyn) will have until January 28 to name their three protected players.

All eight teams will then round out their five-player rosters in the PBA League Draft which will be held on Tuesday, Feb. 13, in Indianapolis, site of the Go Bowling! PBA 60th Anniversary Classic, at Woodland Bowl. The draft will be live streamed on PBA's online bowling channel, Xtra Frame, with teams picking in reverse order of how they finished in 2017. That means Brooklyn will select first – in both rounds – followed by Motown, New York City, L.A., Philadelphia, Silver Lake, Portland and Dallas. Of note, the 2018 draft will not use the serpentine order used in previous years.

There also will be a change in eligibility rules for players wanting to enter the 2018 draft pool. Players who will be

CHICAGO – The Professional Bowlers Association's PBA League will return to Bayside Bowl in Portland, Maine, in April where the most fun-loving, raucous fans in bowling will help celebrate PBAL season six, closing out the ESPN portion of the inaugural Go Bowling! PBA Tour schedule with four consecutive Sunday telecasts, including the PBA League Elias Cup finals on Sunday, May 13, at 1 p.m. EDT.

Leading the eight-team pack into the fast-paced sixth season of PBA League competition will be player-manager Norm Duke's Dallas Strikers, in search of their third consecutive Elias Cup. Chasing the Strikers again will be the hometown Portland Lumberjacks, managed by Tim Mack; the Silver Lake Atom Splitters, managed by Mark Baker; the Philadelphia Hitmen, managed by Jason Couch; L.A. X, managed by Andrew Cain; the New York City WTT KingPins, managed by Carolyn Dorin-Ballard; the Motown Muscle, managed by Del Ballard, and the Brooklyn Styles, managed by Johnny Petraglia.

In keeping with tradition, the PBA League will officially get underway with team managers announcing the names of three players from their 2017 rosters who they want to protect when the annual player draft is held. On January 7 Duke and Mack (Dallas and Portland) will name three players from their 2017 rosters they want to retain for the new season. On January 14, Baker

Tony Franklin, Publisher

Last weekend, I bowled the Swiss Trio tournament in Wichita. It's always a great time with great people. The last two years, I bowled with Derek Hartnell and Wes Malott. Bowling with Wes is such a unique experience in so many ways. First off, he is an amazing talent, I could sit back and watch him bowl for days and never get bored. He is also a very quiet and reserved player, much like Derek, but even more so. I enjoy that part so much because I am not that quiet, and it really allows me to be loud and get him out of his comfort zone so to speak.

Saying something crazy just to get a wry smile out of Wes while we're competing is one of my simple pleasures in life. And that weekend he really needed it.

Now in the case of this tournament, Wes bowled really well. He averaged about 225, but finished around 6th or 7th in average. From watching him bowl, it felt like he completely dominated the lanes for what was out there, but the scores said different.

It got me thinking. I don't bowl that often outside of DFW anymore, so I am pretty conditioned to the talent level of this area. Bowling that tournament, I got to see a lot of younger talent, and specifically the young talent that bowls at Wichita State and Newman University.

Kids like Wesley Low, I hadn't seen him in person yet, Nick Pate who has been winning everything all over the country, Mr. Action, Kamron Doyle, and of course Kris Prather, who just so happened to average 249 for the 12 games.

There is some really good, really strong, young talent out there...just not much of it here in Texas. A few weeks back I had talked about the lack of young female talent in DFW and Texas, but I completely over-looked the men.

I think, because we have some young stars in 20-yr-old Anthony Simonsen and Anthony and Sean Lavery-Spahr, that the men's side is ok...but it's not.

There is a real lack of young male Texas bowling talent. I started to look around at all of the tournaments that I participate in, or least keep an eye on, and you won't find many stars or up and coming stars under the age of 30. Geoffrey Young is 27 and just won the Longview Doubles with Will Barnes of Austin who turns 30 this week. That's just about as young as they get these days.

It's really shocking because I had been under the impression that we have a great pipeline of talent just ready to break onto the scene, but I'm not so sure about that now. In certain parts of the country I think there is great young talent; Wichita for certain has it, but that may be because the kids are transplanting themselves there for the great bowling programs.

Either way, it was a real eye opener for me. I want there to be a lot of bowling challenges out there for the young generation, so that they are hungry to improve and hungry to be challenged. In DFW, we are very fortunate that there are a lot of things to bowl, the problem is almost no one under 27 is bowling in them.

I hope that changes in the near future, but I'm not sure where the next five studs are, and when they will appear.

And speaking of young talent...let's check in with Simonsen and his nine months of extreme travel.

For the year, so far he has travelled a smidge over 60,000 miles, and those are just air miles.

He has also spent a little over 100 nights in a hotel or about 40% of his time.

He is truly burning up the pavement and the lanes. Next month, we will talk with him about the challenges on the mind and body of earning a living in so many different time zones.

Up Your Average

By Susie Minshew

IT'S JUST LEAGUE
PART 3

How to decide what line to play

Which one will carry best?

Pay attention to how your strikes fall. Does this house carry better light? If so, you'll want to be a little left of perfect. If high hits carry and your most common error is to pull it, don't move. That would mean when you make your most common error, you have a good chance of hitting the pocket. If you hit flush do you leave back row? Then don't hit flush. It might be a hard thing to not be "perfect" in the pocket. Get over it. Always line up to hit the pocket at the highest carry percentage for that house.

Which one will everyone else play?

They'll either be swinging the lane or playing more direct. Which one depends on what the lane will allow. Pay attention during practice and prepare some options. If you choose to (or you must) play where someone else is playing, be ready for transition to occur early and often.

Who's on the pair with you?

If the folks on your pair like to curve the ball and the lane will let them, they'll be swinging the ball a lot or a little. If you want to play where they are, the shot will change a bunch and very quickly. If you choose to play outside of them, when you need to move, you might have to make a big move inside and go around them.

If you're playing with straighties or tweeners and have something on the inside, you might want to start there and then stay ahead of them moving in on top of you. If folks are playing all over the lane, stay alert.

Please note your comfort zone was not a consideration about where to play. Keep in mind men usually break the lane down diagonally and women generally break it down north and south. Use the early frames to try all your options.

Remember, you can't start over but you can start right here and make a new beginning. You do not want to drive home wondering what would have happened if...

On my way back from the snack bar, I first noticed the three entering the main doors. Unlike others an hour and a half before league, they stopped about twenty feet inside the doors to look around. Ok, fine, nothing really unusual, so I went back to the shop and drilled a customer's ball to be used that night in the Thursday Men's Petroleum league.

After what was probably about twenty minutes, Ellis and Hofer brought in the three guests to the pro shop. The face of the older of the two men rang a bell, but nothing popped to mind. He then held out his hand and said, "Hi, I'm Chuck Lorre. Nice to meet you, Mark."

Needless to say, I was literally floored. That bell in my head rang at about the same time I shook his hand and returned the greeting, or at least tried to. Here I am in Mike Austin's Bowling Dynamix Pro Shop minding my own business, and who walks in but two major movers and shakers of American network television.

As of press time, we had yet to hear from CLP or Warner Brothers studio on any possible recording. But if there is, I wouldn't be able to mention it until after something is aired. If there is, I'll pass it along.

Let me add here my wife Michelle is an absolute fan of Lorre and his work, going back to his writer days on 'Roseanne' in the late 80s. It's fair to say she's watched quite a bit of his work since (ok, pretty much all of it). She is still floored by the autographs and will be for some time. Although the reach of this forum is a little smaller in scope than a national television network, let me take this time to publicly thank Mr. Lorre and Mr. Molaro for their time last December.

CHUCK LORRE PRODUCTIONS, #562

A special thank you to all the folks who were so gracious and helpful to Steve and I when we visited the great city of Houston last year.

Dr. Ken Hodgkinson, Loree Munro, Jim Sanders, Tim Powers, and Dougald McDougald at Porter High School.

Ryan Wanzong at the Bear Creek Roller Rink.

Steve Hofer and Mark London at the Emerald Bowl.

Mike Steenberg and Richard Evans at Bedrock City Comics.

Linda Johnson.

Pastor John Gray at Lakewood Church.

Jim Coit at Garden Oaks Baptist Church.

Dr. Brian Greeney at Klein Oak High School.

Judy Parsons, Julie, Parker and Michael Pruski.

You taught us that the holy trinity in Texas is God, football and brisket. Not necessarily in that order.

Last week, I illustrated a newer marketing approach from Steve Schroeder, founder and CEO of Smart Community Technologies. The strategy behind Geo Fencing is unique and takes what used to be done with demographically categorized zip codes and brought it into the digital age.

With the fine tuning of the local marketed audience, SCT can reach a specific audience in a very short amount of time than thought before. It's very detailed and worth a read for yourself at www.smartcommunitytech.com.

studying marketing in our little corner of the world the last few weeks is how much lifestyles have changed with more and more things to do. It's not that bowling is further down the list, but other activities have in some ways caught up. The days when centers marketed themselves and got their name exposed to the public, was to simply unlock the doors, seems even further away than ever before. Consumers have many more choices on where and how to spend their dollars, and are much more aggressively marketed.

Other marketing specialists I spoke with who did not want to be quoted in the column said bowling is not alone in its struggles to "find a new audience", as one put it. Some of the basic points that did come out again was showing the consumer value for their dollar, providing a clean environment, and nowadays, giving them something in return, other than a good time. That's why we see customer rewards programs everywhere.

I want to thank those professional marketers who took time to respond to my questions and comments, and look forward to what could very well be a periodic update of this rapidly changing industry.

Finally this week, I can explain those two seconds on CBS-TV last Monday night. Yes, it was just two. And no, it was not a leftover aberration from the recent solar eclipse. And no, it wasn't the type of two seconds Justin Timberlake and Janet Jackson shared with the world on a Super Bowl halftime show a few years ago.

As my regular readers remember, television sitcom creator, producer, and writer Chuck Lorre (Grace Under Fire, Two and a Half Men, Big Bang Theory), along with his head writer and co-executive producer Steve Molaro, and a Warner Brothers publicist (Hollywood studio where 'Big Bang' is recorded), stopped by Emerald Bowl last December to scout possible shooting sites for a 'Big Bang' spinoff, whose pilot episode was shown last Monday, called 'Young Sheldon'.

As you may have noticed, or as your BBT nerd fans stop the DVR at the very end of the show to read a Lorre trademark, what he calls a vanity card inserted at the end of every Chuck Lorre-produced program. It's only seen for two seconds, but it usually contains something thought provoking and funny.

Last Monday's Chuck Lorre Productions vanity card #562, seen here: (chucklorre.com/index-ys.php?p=562) thanked numerous people he visited on his trip to Houston last winter.

A total of twenty-three people were listed. I was lucky to be one of them. Some of you who stopped in during the team portion of this year's Texas State USBC recall my story about the director's chair sitting behind the main pro shop counter. I explained briefly on how the chair got there. Now, here are other details I couldn't reveal until now.

As Emerald Bowl owner Don Ellis, Jr., Emerald GM

Steve Hofer, Lorre, and Molaro explained that day, they were searching for a 1980's-looking bowling center for exterior and interior camera shots for a spinoff series, featuring a childhood version of BBT character Dr. Sheldon Cooper. Cooper has been seen over the years, although not recently, at a local center proving his bowling skill is almost up there with his intellect, or at least, trying to prove it as such.

YOUTH BOWLER OF THE MONTH

Kaitlyn George

Kaitlyn George, 17, is the youth representative on the NCTUSBC Board of Directors, and a senior at Kennedale High School.
Hometown Bowling Center: Forum Bowl and Brunswick Zone Watauga
How many leagues: I bowl two; a sport league and youth travel league
High Game: 288 High Series: 701
Other Sports/Hobbies: Lieutenant of the bands color guard which takes up most of my time outside of bowling.
Favorite Bowler: Carolyn Dorin Ballard, I appreciate everything she has done for me.
Why did you apply for the NCTUSBC board: Once I started helping with the NCTUSBC tournaments, it really helped me understand the business and the importance of the association. It allowed me to make so many new connections. I love meeting new people and I really feel like this position was meant for me. My goal is to get more youth involved in the programs and I want to help more kids get into the Junior Gold event next year since it is here in Dallas/Ft Worth.
Favorite bowling accomplishment: Winning the Jenna Kay tournament last year, the U20 handicap division.
How was your Junior Gold experience: It was the most stressful week of my life. You are competing against the best kids in this amazing country. All of the hard work you have put into the game your whole life is on display for everyone to see, it really is the future of the sport.
What are your plans for college: I will be attending Ottawa University in Kansas. I received a partial scholarship to bowl for them and I want to major in elementary education.
